In dingy, stale rooms, where the thin glimmer of sunshine only warms the noisome odors into more fetid aggressiveness and quickens the lurking germs of thousands of pallid children, all of them ill-fed and imperfectly developed, and many, oh! so many of them stricken with the pains of infantile ailments. The steam pipe has again come to the fore. The saying that lightning does not strike twice in the same place is not true about steam-pipe explosions, for this burst is also at Fulton street, where the late explosion occurred. A neighboring cellar was filled with sand, a tot of tobacco ruined, and much damage wrought in business houses in the neighborhood. It is about time that this sort of piping should be piped out.
